

Preparing for Your Visit

The executive physical program at Northwestern Executive Health has been designed with an understanding of your demanding schedule. Preparing for your annual exam will take very little of your time.

Step 1: Scheduling your executive physical

When you are ready to schedule your executive physical, simply contact us by phone or email approximately 8 weeks before you want to have your examination. This will provide time for us to coordinate all of the specialists and testing appropriate for you. An Executive Health coordinator will also provide assistance with coordination of concierge services such as identifying lodging, interpretation and special dietary requirements.

Step 2: Complete a medical history questionnaire (first visit only)

Prior to your first visit, we ask that you complete a medical history questionnaire.

Step 3: Pre-visit physician consultation

You and the physician that will coordinate your executive physical will have a pre-visit telephone consultation to discuss your medical needs and concerns. Together you will collaborate on which specialists would be most beneficial for you to see during your visit. If the physician would like to review prior medical records, we will obtain those records on your behalf.

Step 4: Pre-appointment preparation

Northwestern Executive Health will contact you prior to your appointment with your customized itinerary and preparation instructions. Typical preparation instructions are attached. Your instructions may be different based on your unique schedule.
